Goals / remit

Goals / remit of the organisation: The Pew Charitable Trusts has three overarching areas of interest:

- Improving public policy. We study and promote nonpartisan policy solutions for pressing and emerging problems affecting the American public and the global community.
- Informing the public. The Pew Research Center, a Washington-based subsidiary, is home to most of our information initiatives. It uses impartial, fact-based public-opinion polling and other research tools to track important issues and trends.
- Stimulating civic life. We support national initiatives in the United States that encourage civic participation. In our hometown of Philadelphia, we support organizations that create a thriving arts and culture community and institutions that enhance the well-being of the region's neediest citizens.

The Pew Environment Group is the conservation arm of The Pew Charitable Trusts. Our mission is to help protect the natural environment and the rich array of life it supports. Specifically, we focus on the promotion of policies and practices that protect the global environment, preserve healthy forests and marine ecosystems, with a particular emphasis on global marine fisheries. The Pew Environment Group operates a European Marine Programme, with a central office in Brussels and a branch office in London. The goal of this programme is to strengthen the role of the European Union in ending global overfishing and reducing the destruction of the world's oceans. Our work in the EU is focused on the design and promotion of sustainable marine and fisheries policies, informed and guided by the most up-to-date and accurate scientific information. In addition, we are engaged in efforts to raise public awareness about the increasing environmental problems affecting Europe's marine environment and the world's oceans in general.

Activities

Main EU initiatives covered the year before by activities falling under the scope of the Transparency Register:

The Pew Environment Group operates a European Marine Programme office in Brussels in its pursuit to end global overfishing and reduce the destruction of the world's oceans and a branch office in London that advances marine conservation in the UK and its outermost territories. Our work in the EU aims to contribute to the design of sustainable European marine and fisheries policies. More particularly, our areas of interest are:

1. Ending Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated (IUU) fishing practices;
2. Decreasing the over-capacity of EU fishing fleets;
3. Phasing out environmentally harmful subsidies that damage marine ecosystems and resources;
4. Rigorously applying science-based catch limits for endangered fish species and timely fish stock recovery plans; and
5. Ending destructive fishing practices such as deep sea bottom trawling.

Pew's work is informed and guided by the most up-to-date and accurate scientific information. In addition, we are engaged in efforts to raise public awareness about the increasing environmental problems affecting Europe's marine environment and the world's oceans in general. Pew has been active in Europe since 2004, initiating and leading large NGO coalitions to help make marine policies more sustainable.
